Shoppers at White Lion Walk see spots

On Saturday 21st March children visiting White Lion Walk Shopping Centre in Guildford were in for a treat as the town's resident youth theatre company, The Man in the Moon (MIM), was offering free spotty face painting to celebrate the launch of their new show The Hundred and One Dalmatians.

Throughout the afternoon MIM members transformed over 40 young shoppers into lovely spotty pooches and talked to them about their new family friendly production which is appearing at The Electric Theatre in April.

The show tells the classic story of Pongo and Missis' journey across the country to rescue their litter of gorgeous Dalmatian puppies from the wicked Cruella De Vil.

Paul Rogers-Branch, Director of The Man in the Moon, commented: "We had great fun at our face painting event at White Lion Walk and it was wonderful to see lots of children out shopping with their families walking around as adorable mini Dalmatians. As Guildford's resident youth Theatre Company we pride ourselves on supporting the future of acting talent and, in fact, many of the performers in this show have recently passed their Trinity graded drama exams whilst rehearsing for our production of The Hundred and One Dalmatians. We are so thrilled that they will soon be sharing their incredible acting skills with friends, family and the public and we hope to see lots of the shoppers we talked to last weekend in the audience."

Dawn Phelps from White Lion Walk, added: "We always strive to support local businesses and community groups in the town so we were delighted to host The Man in the Moon theatre company so they could promote their new show. It was wonderful to see our shoppers supporting MIM and on behalf of everyone here at the centre I wish the company and their young actors all the best with their upcoming production."
