Local children create 'blooming marvellous' window for Queen's birthday

On Saturday 4th June over 60 children from Surrey took part in special workshops at White Lion Walk Shopping Centre in Guildford to commemorate the Queen's 90th birthday. Throughout the day the children, aged between 3 and 15, took part in gardening workshops alongside White Lion Walk's event partner Clandon Park Garden Centre to help build an incredible plant pot window display within the shopping centre.

The young participants not only helped the experts from Clandon Park Garden Centre pot up the plants for the display, but also designed their very own pot which now features in the incredible window display that can be found at White Lion Walk (next to NEXT children's wear) from 4th to 19th June - covering the Queen's official celebratory birthday dates.

The design of the window was created by Nicola Geraghty from Clandon Park and is themed around Buckingham Palace's gardens, The Queen and her love of corgis.

Steve Cotney, Centre Manager at White Lion Walk, commented:

"The potting workshops were a complete success and it was wonderful to see so many children taking part to build the window display in celebration of Her Majesty's 90th birthday. The window has now been revealed to the public and I urge anyone in Guildford to pop in to the centre to admire the children's work, and of course Clandon Park's wonderful design.

"The initiative followed our sponsorship of Guildford in Bloom for 2016. The Guildford in Bloom committee bring together so many people from the local community and promote imaginative ways to make the town and surrounding areas look their best and champion Guildford's natural environment. As a centre that prides itself on its environmental practices, we felt the workshops provided local children with a great opportunity to use their creativity, and start learning about gardening in a unique and, most importantly, fun environment."
